

the top of the big grandstand. The first event of the day began a few minutes after the sharp crack of the opening bomb. It was the two-hour distance race for a purse of $5,000, donated by members of the Aero Club of America. The purse was split so that there were three prizes.

The echoes of the bomb had hardly died away when across the field the wings of a monoplane shot up from the ground and swept toward the starting line. It was Molsant, and he was flying the same machine with which he won the Statue of Liberty race. "Bud" Mars, of the Curtiss team, and Simon and Latham, of the French team, followed quickly, and were soon chasing Molsant about the course round the red and white pylons at almost a mile-a-minute clip.

Mars was soon down with a broken engine, and after a few laps Latham's engine became balky and he was forced in front of his hangar. Molsant and Simon were alone in the air flying close to each other. When they passed the grandstand Molsant let out his speed a notch and shot in a flash. Simon, who was flying a biplane, was finished, and Molsant was flagged. Then it was announced that Simon had protested that Molsant had fouled him by passing too close to him in the air. The judges penalized the Chicagoan three laps, but in a few minutes he was again whizzing around only a few feet in the air. Latham and Simon were once more in the contest, and Molsant appeared to be keeping out of their way.

It was a queer race when the finish was put up two hours after the start. Molsant was declared the winner. He had been round the course fifty-six times, a distance of about 87 1/2 miles. As he came to earth victorious the accident occurred. His machine swerved, bumped along the green for a few feet and toppled over on its side. But Molsant did not get a scratch. Latham was second in this race, with thirty-five laps to his credit, and Simon third, with twenty-seven laps. Molsant took away $2,000; Latham, $1,000, and Simon $500.

With the distance event over, Johnstone and Drexel started skyward in quest of altitude. They were soon specks in the waning sunlight.

In a special speed race, started shortly after Johnstone and Drexel had disappeared in the sky, Audemar, in a yellow Demoselle, was pitted against Garros, in a white Demoselle. It was merely an exhibition, and after a few laps they both darted across the field and came down gracefully together in front of their hangars. Garros had won.

Monoplane Wins.

The speed race between Grahame-White, in a monoplane, and McCurdy, in a biplane, demonstrated the superiority of the monoplane. They both did ten laps of the course, a distance of about 15.5 miles. Grahame-White's unofficial time was 14:34:12; McCurdy's time was 25:43:04. Grahame-White had finished the last lap and was gliding toward the judges' stand when his propeller snapped. In a moment he was buried under a wrecked machine, about which a cloud of escaping vapor arose. Helpers rushed upon the field, lifted the broken aircraft and hauled the Englishman from the wreckage. He limped a few steps, then waved his hand gladly to the crowds as a signal that he was not seriously injured.

Five minutes later he gave every one in front of the grandstand thrills by stepping from the biplane into a Farman biplane, which he maneuvered unaccountably near the heads of the spectators. But he was happy, having won $3,000 by taking the speed contest. McCurdy got $1,000.

Auburn was to be matched against Mars in a second speed race, but the latter aviator did not go up. Auburn rounded the course for several laps, which netted him $500.

The red lights were strung across the field, the evening shadows began to fall, and Johnstone and Drexel came to earth before the stands. He circled about over the flickering lights, the wings of his biplane appearing like a halo in the spotlights above the red glare from the field below. He soon disappeared toward the hangars in the dusk.

Will Resign in Disgrace.

J. Armstrong Drexel announced to-night at a dinner given to a number of fellow aviators that he would resign.

from the Aero Club of America "in disgust," because of the ruling prohibiting Grahame-White from a second trial at the $10,000 Statue of Liberty flight yesterday by John B. Molsant. He gave out a letter of protest, in part as follows:

"I wish to protest against the action of the Belmont Park aviation committee in refusing to allow Mr. Grahame-White, the Englishman, to fly a second time for the Statue of Liberty prize. Their doing so is contrary to all traditions of sport and honor, and as an American familiar with conditions of sports in Europe, I cannot allow an act of such unfairness to pass without protest.

"By their decision they have barred such flyers as Radley, the Englishman, and Auburn, the Frenchman, from competing. As a general rule, it will be said in Europe that the Liberty prize was judged into an American's hands. This will only be the plain truth, according to the conditions of the contest as understood by the aviators.

The plain fact is that the committee, seeing a chance to win the prize for an American, went back upon their word, and by closing the contest and the official meeting stopped two men, De Lesseps and Grahame-White, from trying again, and the other five from even competing."

BALDWIN AGAIN ASKS RETRACTION

Tells Roosevelt That He Has Made Misstatement of Facts.

New Haven, Conn., October 31.—Judge Simon E. Baldwin, Democratic nominee for Governor, sent a letter to-day to Former President Roosevelt in reply to the recent letter of the latter relating to Judge Baldwin's stand on certain labor legislation. The letter says in part:

"I have received your two answers (both undated) to my letter of October 24; one written before you received it and the other written after you had read it. Apparently you have misunderstood the point of my communication. In that I referred to the fact that, in a public address in New Hampshire, you had charged me with holding a certain view of a point of law, I then stated that I did not hold that view, and never did, and requested that you retract the charge.

"The passage from your address to which I referred was one in which, after referring to me as a former judge, you stated that I was 'a man who took the view that labor is a potent for the workman, when driven to accept any employment, to bind himself not to be compensated if he lost his life or limb in that occupation.'

"In your first undated letter you state that in your address you mentioned that the Democratic candidate occupied a retrogressive attitude as to the right of legislative bodies to interfere with what you regard as the utterly misallied industry of labor, men and women to contract for the performance of work under conditions which jeopardized their welfare and their lives and limbs; and that the Republican party, on the contrary, stood for what you regard as the only proper progressive attitude, which is that it is not competent for the workmen who may be driven by dire need to accept any employment in spite of the conditions imposed upon his acceptance, to bind himself not to be bound in any way by any action of his; not to be compensated if his health is damaged, or if he loses life or limb in that occupation.

"You then remark that I said in my letter to you of October 24, as printed, that the view which you thus stated as that of the Republican party, would be opposed to the settled principles of law, and that no competent lawyer could or would take it, and to ascribe such a position to me was calculated to affect my standing as a lawyer.

"As to this, I would say that this view, which you describe as that of the Republican party, is the view which is generally taken by courts and lawyers, and was explicitly taken by me in my message on American railroad law, in regard to which I refer you to my letter of October 24. It is part of the general American common law, resting upon principles of right and justice, that have been generally accepted by the people of the United States.

"I did not complain in my former letter, nor do I now of your quarantining me as having been a retrogressive. I am not objecting to the use of adjectives, but to misstatements of facts, the retraction of which it is most important to me to secure on account of the high position which you formerly held as the first citizen of the United States.

"You have stated in public that I took the view that it was competent for the workmen, when driven to accept any employment, to bind himself not to be compensated if he lost life or limb in that occupation. I have denied that I ever took such a view. I will add that I have long been in favor of the principle of workmen's compensation acts (though not unaware of the constitutional difficulties in applying it in this country), and

Lad Seriously Injured—Alleged Counterfeiter Arrested.

Other News.

Spotsylvania, Va., October 31.—While giving some exercises to a group of his pupils, Oak Hill, about sixteen miles from this place, Sam Haisman, a lad, was kicked and seriously, if not fatally, injured. The horse struck him on the forehead, rendering him unconscious, and besides breaking the skull out a deep gash, about two inches long, across the forehead. The child was playing with his little sister at the time of the accident, and lay in the pasture almost an hour unconscious, with the little purchase from the hospital, was sent to the General Hospital, where an operation was performed this afternoon, and at last released from the hospital with rest easier.

Mr. Williams came here about two years ago, and during his pastorate the church has increased wonderfully; in fact, outgrown its present quarters, rendering it necessary to purchase a new building on the corner of Main Street.
